This piece of work is set out to appraise how Minister's Integrity affect his effectiveness in the Pastoral Ministry. This research work used Primary source of data collection which is considered generally to be the ideal method. Questionnaire was the only instrument used in this research work to collect information. The questionnaire was distributed among ten churches in Ogbomosho South Local Government Area of which five were Baptist churches and five non-Baptist churches- with the aim of collecting information about personal data of respondents as related to An Appraisal of the Minister's Integrity as a Factor for Effective Pastoral Ministry.

It was discovered that integrity is an essential factor which play a vital role in the Minister's effectiveness in pastoral Ministry. It also revealed that a minister with integrity, however, must endeavour to manage time well, has good home control and good reputation in the society. In addition to that ministers must be aware that whatever they preached must be practiced. The work also revealed that much is required from the ministers as one talks of speech, relationship, respect and the kind of Christian imager showing to the people in the society. As a result, ministers need to be conscious of their integrity for their ways of life, what church members see them do or hear ministers say go along way to influence the life of the members either in a negative or positive manners. Ministers are also to watch their integrity when it come set or the society to which they belong; in time management in attitudes towards money or wealth acquisition and of course in every sphere of human life.

Above all, Ministers should see Jesus as model of Integrity in the Pastoral Ministry. Hence, there is need for Ministers Association to address this issue of Pastoral Integrity and its role in the Minister's Effectiveness in Pastoral Ministry in their annual conferences and retreats.
